High Conflict Divorce: A Model for Child-Centered Reunification Therapy

For anyone who has worked with High Conflict Divorcing families and has been frustrated in how to help. Child-Centered Reunification Therapy is designed to give children a voice in the reunification therapy process. Child-Centered Reunification therapy uses a unique two-therapist approach, equally representing the parents and child, and integrates parent education, co-parenting skills, mental health education filial play therapy, and experiential therapy. Throughout the conference participants will gain knowledge in the CCRT theoretical foundations, process, and techniques of Child-Centered Reunification Therapy.
